A: Hi Fiona, how are you?
B: I'm good. How are you?
A: Yeah, good, good.
B: Good.
B: Thanks for inviting me today.
A: No problem. What would you like to eat?
B: Hmmm. What do they have?
A: All the food is Tibetan food. Dumplings, mutton, noodles... things like that.
B: OK. How about some noodles?
A: Noodles sounds good.
B: Yeah.
A: Do you want a big bowl or a small bowl?
B: I'll have a big bowl.
A: Hmmm. Do you eat meat?
B: Yeah. Meat's no problem. You eat meat, right?
A: Ah... Usually I do, but today I'm not eating meat.
B: OK. So, will you have noodles, too?
A: Um. I'll have a big bowl, but I won't have any meat [in the noodles].
B:OK.

A: Then, what would you like to drink?
B: What do they have?
A: They have black tea, milk tea, and butter tea.
B: Let me see... and what you like?
A: Um, I like milk tea. How about you?
B: Yeah, milk tea sounds good. Does it have sugar?
A: Um, usually it doesn't have sugar. I can ask them though. Do you want sugar?
B: Yes, please. I usually drink tea with sugar.
A: OK.

A: Oh, this one has meat. This must be yours.
B: Right, that is mine. This one has no meat. This must be yours.
A: Yeah.

A: Um, this one has sugar. This must be yours.
B: Thank you. This one has no sugar, must be yours.
A: Thank you.
B: Don't you drink tea with sugar?
A: Um. Usually I don't drink tea with sugar.
B: Um... What do you drink in your tea?
A: Usually I drink tea with salt.
B: Hmmm. Interesting. I must try it sometime.
A: Yeah. You should.
